■ Newark's On The Right
TIP: On May 30, the I-TIP (Instructional Theory in Practice) Program of the Newark Public Schools was among the 18 exemplary urban school programs presented at the New Jersey School Boards Association's Urban Education Spring Conference. "The schools that have implemented these programs have documented improved student achievement in reading, math and science, as well as advances in the creative arts and values education," said Dr. Robert E. Boose, NJSBA executive director. More than 200 school board members, administrators, teachers, and parents attended and listened to an address by Bruce S. Gordon, vice president for marketing at Bell Atlantic, speak on "Preparing Our Students for the 21st Century." —JAMESBURGH

■ Blacks Get Down To Business: The National Black Chamber of Commerce (NBCC) is hosting an economic summit of black business owners in Fort Worth, TX on June 17. "The summit would seek to develop immediate strategies that can help return thousands of diverse black-owned businesses to their rightful status," stated Oscar Coffey, NBCC's CEO and President. Coffey also said that the summit will examine ways in which successful black business owners can help to create an economically sound black business community nationwide.

Lack of police protocol hints of cover up in Newark teen's shooting

NEWARK — An African-American teen lies in critical condition at University Hospital and several Newark police officers are under the gun for alleged misuse of their guns.
Early Tuesday morning on June 9, Howard Caesar was reportedly shot in the abdomen by police after he and a younger boy fled the scene of South 17th Street and 16th Avenue where they had crashed a car they had earlier stolen. The lack of a police officer, witness reports of police officers picking up used cartridges after the shooting, and reports that the car itself was reported one minute after Caesar was shot, has area residents and Newark Mayor Sharpe James suggesting that a cover up may be a strong possibility.

Nine officers in all are allegedly involved in the incident but six have currently been identified by Newark Police Director William Celester and acting Essex County Prosecutor James Mulvihill as the ones who were present during the entire incident. They are: Michael Cavallero, 28; John Costa, 25; Kenneth Holloway, 30; Gerard Piacenza, 23; and Natalis Mendez, 31, and North District Officer Dino D'Elia.

Caesar was reportedly behind the wheel of a Camaro taken from the home of D'Elia's mother which reportedly is the motivation behind the action of the officers. The six officers identified have been reassigned to desk jobs and suspended without pay, while the three who were not present were given new weapons and allowed to return to their street duties.

The incident brings the ugliness of police brutality back to the forefront in New Jersey as people have begun to protest in East Orange and Newark where they say

D-Nice wows 'em at Weequahic

D-Nice wows 'em at Weequahic

NEWARK — On June 4, 1992, rapper D-Nice spoke at a special assembly at Newark's Weequahic High School. Hosted by representatives from YES-Youth Excited about Success Magazine, the rally paid tribute to the school's nationally ranked track team and National Science Merit Award winners. The Summer 1992 edition of YES Magazine, in which both Weequahic's track stars and science scholars are featured, was officially unveiled as part of the program as well.

D-Nice, who will be featured in the upcoming issue of YES Magazine, gained attention in the rap industry as DJ for Boogie Down Productions. His successful solo career includes his popular album D-Nice To The Rescue and he is currently the manager of rap sensations the U-MCs and the Fu-Schnickens.

D-Nice spoke to students in Weequahic's capacity filled auditorium about being positive and stopping the violence in their communities and presented the 15 student achievers on the track and science teams with autographed posters and albums.

The eight science scholars honored were Tawana Taylor, Yashonda Welome, Rhonda Summers, Jennifer Crossley, Alim Butler, Tonia Zeigler, Maurice Perry, and Wahab Shabazz. The student athletes featured at the assembly were Ali Roberts, Jermaine Thompson, Naem Reynolds, Nathaniel Brookins, Keith Barker, Dexter Barker, and Dillion Heart.

Talent search for BET's Triple Threat now underway

NEW YORK — Black Entertainment Television (BET) is now seeking individuals from the New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut area as contestants for the new music-oriented family game show, Triple Threat, to premieres on September 14th.

Eighty episodes are being planned for the 1992-93 fall season, all of which will be taped in August at studios in Secaucus. Auditions for the Newark area will be held on June 20 at the Newark Public Library.

Triple Threat is a trivia show which tests the musical knowledge of two three-person teams who will compete against others for prizes. Each team will feature members of the same family representing three generations answering questions on music associated with television, motion pictures, or the recording industry. Each team member will be asked questions on music considered to be most popular during their respective generations.

For more information regarding contestant casting in New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, call the BET Triple Threat Contestant Hotline at 201-865-8637.

FAAPO honors leaders of the black community

NEWARK — The 1992 heroes of the black community were honored recently by the Federation of Afro-American Police Officers, Inc. (FAAPO). These people carry an awesome responsibility on their shoulders as they march to the drum beat of justice for all, especially the community of African-American decent.

FAAPO encourages all to support and rally behind these individuals in order to save the neighborhoods of all communities. FAAPO President Ron Arbuckle called them generals in the war for the streets.

Saluting African heritage

JERSEY CITY — Human rights activist Dr. Betty Shabazz (center) is an alumna of Jersey City State College, spoke at the College's sixth annual "Salute to Graduates of African Heritage" program, the widow of Malcolm X who currently serves as the director of communications and public relations at Medgar Evers College in New York. Dr. Shabazz discussed the program's theme, "Uniting for the Challenge of Pan Africanism for the 21st Century," with Carl B. Dixon (l), co-facilitator of JCSC's Black Administrators, Alumni, Faculty, Staff and Student Organization (BAAFSO) which sponsors the annual program; Barbara Johnson-Young, program chair; and Dr. William Maxwell, JCSC president.

'Best' man of the year

William Best

NEWARK—William Best of Randolph was recently named Newark's "Man of the Year" by Mayor Shane James on behalf of the city's Division of Economic Development. Best is Vice President and Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) Officer with National Community Bank, headquartered in West Paterson.

In making the award presentation recently at the Cafe 21, Newark, the Mayor commended not only Best's ongoing efforts in meeting community needs, but also National Community Bank's recent commitment to designate $20 million for a "unique and innovative loan program for first time low-to-moderate income home buyers."

Best, a career banker, began in Newark as a management trainee with the Howard Savings Bank. He also held a position with Midland National Bank prior to joining National Community Bank in February 1988. In 1991 he was named Vice President and CRA Officer for the $4 billion asset bank.

Focus on the black diva

PLAINFIELD—The black opera diva is to be the subject of a program sponsored by the Langston Hughes Lecture Series on Wednesday, June 17, at 7 p.m. in the meeting room of the Plainfield Public Library. The program will feature a lecture and performance by Yvonne Hopkins.

Yvonne Hopkins began her singing career as a soloist in the St. James A.M.E. Church youth choir, in Newark. A few years ago, Miss Hopkins signed a contract with the Metropolitan Opera Chorus to sing in thirty-two performances of the world premier of "Porgy and Bess" at the Metropolitan Opera.

Yvonne Hopkins has studied classical music and holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from William Paterson College. One of her earlier musical performances was in the Miss New Jersey Beauty Pageant in which she performed several patriotic arias and won the title of "Miss Paterson State College" and second runner-up to "Miss New Jersey."

Miss Hopkins is a former member of the New Jersey Garden State Opera Company under the direction of Maestro Alfredo Sillipigni. During her years with the opera company, Miss Hopkins studied under the guidance of Metropolitan opera singer Licia Albanese. Miss Hopkins is a former member of the Heritage Choir and soloist at the St. James Presbyterian Church, New York City, under the leadership and direction of world renowned concert and opera singer Dorothy Maynor.

She has appeared in concert in New York City; Washington, DC; White Plains, NY, and other United Nations General Assembly.

Langston Hughes programs are free and open to the public. Funding has been made in part by the New Jersey Council on the Arts, Department of State, through a grant administered by the Union County Office of Cultural and Heritage Affairs.

Answers to your letters

Here are excerpts from some of the thoughtful letters we have recently received from terrific readers like you. My brief responses follow your letters.

A Crying Child: "My one year old child drives me nuts with his loud crying. I give him everything I can think of to silence him, but nothing works. What should I do?"
Ms. D., Seattle

Your intelligent child is probably manipulating you with his crying. He knows that he will get what he wants, if he cries. So give him plenty of love after he stops crying. If nothing is physically wrong, ignore the crying. Or, you are setting yourself up for many years of crying.

Religion: "Your column about people who go to church on Sunday."

Newark Tri-Sport Collaboration gets Mayor's support

NEWARK — Newark Mayor Sharpe James recently met with representatives of the Mam of Newark and the Peter Westbrook Foundation (PWF), a fencing organization, to announce the new program which aims to promote individual, non-team sports as athletic alternatives for youth from Newark and other urban communities.

The Mayor was joined by: (l-r) UGF members June Goins and

UGF community relations director; Peter Perry, UGF finance director; Althea Lester, UGF executive director; tennis great and founder of the national ABC program, Arthur Ashe; Mayor James; Bob Davis, national ABC director; former Newark native Peter Westbrook, Olympic Bronze Medalist and PWF director, and Michael Lofton, Olympic fencer and PWF official. Both Westbrook and Lofton will compete on the 1992 Olympic fencing team. For more information, call Davis at the Newark ABC office 201-733-5440 or Tennyson at the Urban Golf Foundation 201-428-7688.

A Brand New Day for old Elizabeth building

ELIZABETH — On Wednesday, June 24, at 11 a.m. Brand New Day, Inc., a non-profit housing corporation based in Elizabethport will conduct a dedication ceremony at the site of its latest project at 201-203 First Street.

The project is a total reconstruction of a three-story brick building previously occupied by stores and apartments, but vacant and deteriorating for three years. The new structure consists of 12 two bedroom apartments of about 950 square feet each.

The project is the second one built by Brand New Day, Inc. The first, located in the same area, is also a 12-family structure and has been in service for three years.

Brand New Day, Inc. was created in 1985 by the Board and Officers of the Elizabethport Presbyterian Center, a mission of the Elizabeth Presbyterian. The purpose of the new corporation is to provide affordable housing for low and moderate income individuals and families in the Elizabethport area by rehabilitating existing buildings or acquiring land and constructing new buildings.

Members of Brand New Day say they appreciate the strong support of the city of Elizabeth and people like Elizabeth Councilman Casimir Kowalczyk, Neil De Haan, director of the Department of Community Development, Mayor Tom Dunn, and Constellation Bancorp and National State Bank.

For more information on the program, call Reverend Joseph Garcia, director of the Elizabethport Presbyterian Center and vice president of Brand New Day at 908-351-4850.

people who go to church on Sunday, but treat other people badly, is right on the mark."

Mr. J., Patterson, NJ

"I found your comments about religion to be insulting. Everybody who goes to church isn't a Christian. Stop judging people."

Ms. B., Cleveland

Dear Mr. J. and Ms. B.

Your letters let us know that there are many, many views on religion. I criticize only those who profess to be "Christian," but who act like the devil. There are many devoted Christians.

Black Leaders: "You said that all black leaders do is talk, talk, talk. Well, all you do is write, write, write."

Ms. W., Baltimore

"I loved your column on black leaders. They need to stop talking and do something to help the people."

Mr. G., Hartford, Ct

Dear Ms. W. and Mr. G.

It takes all kinds of views to make this world tick. I wish that black leaders would do something that would make a concrete improvement in our lives. Something that we can proudly talk about. Until they do, I will continue to write, write, write...

Personal Insecurity: "Dear Dr. Faulkner, I really was excited about your column on how ugly insecure people can be. There are at least three people in my life whose behavior is exactly like the behavior that you described."

Ms. H., Miami, FL

Dear Ms. H.

I received hundreds of letters from readers just like you who are trying to straighten out their lives and who are trying to improve their own behavior. I am still trying, belatedly, to send copies of the columns to many people who requested them. If anyone has not yet received the requested columns, don't worry, they will be in the mail soon.

"Dear Dr. Faulkner: Blackmen and women are having a hell of a time getting together. Maybe we spend too much time talking about it."

Mr. P., Los Angeles

Dear Mr. P.:

We have got to find a solution, fast, to the problem between black men and women. Everyone of us is affected. To find a solution we must identify the problem, discuss it, find a solution and put the solution into action immediately. Let's talk, then ACT.

Philip Morris Doesn't Want Kids To Smoke

One of the most trying aspects of being a parent is encouraging your child to make the right choices — not just to follow along. In today's complex society, growing up involves more pressures and choices than ever before. Studies show that young people do things because their friends do. Smoking is one of those things.

At Philip Morris U.S.A., we believe that smoking is an adult decision. We don't want children and teenagers to smoke.

That's why the tobacco industry is offering a booklet aimed at helping parents meet the challenge of providing their children with the tools to resist peer influence. The booklet, "Tobacco: Helping Youth Say No" is designed to keep parents and children communicating about important issues like smoking.

To continue its longstanding commitment that smoking is not for young people, the tobacco industry also has strengthened its marketing code and is supporting state legislation to make it tougher for young people to buy cigarettes. We are also working with retailers for strict compliance with state laws prohibiting sales of cigarettes to minors.

Don't "cross" up our youth

From June 5 - 8, hundreds of thousands of vendors, merchants, business people and curiosity seekers made their way over to Black Expo '92 to see what their peers were up to in the world of trade and retail. One of the more popular booths was the Cross Colors booth. You've heard of them, right? They're African-American manufacturers of some of the hippest, hottest, and socially conscious sportswear to hit the scene in a long time. But, Cross Colors, we have to truly question your social responsibility when we look at their price tags.

Yes, we understand that competition is fierce out there for the African-American surplus dollar, but in this instance, there is more to be considered than buying into the American ideal of capitalism first. Our young people need to be encouraged to do more with their extra dollars than to spend them haphazardly on some sports clothes. Is it socially responsible for Cross Colors to sport a shirt that says "Increase the Peace" but charge $30 for it? Do you want our young brothers and sisters to spend $50 (at the minimum) for a pair of shorts with African design? Pride in our heritage is essential but for $100 an outfit? We don't think so. How many of our young people have been wounded or lost their lives because of some overpriced sneakers that someone would die to protect and another would kill to have? We're afraid that as the popularity of Cross Colors grows, so will the death numbers while the money in our pockets shrinks to nothing. Being culturally responsible means more than wearing a shirt with a Malcolm X or Martin Luther King quote on it. Responsibility begins at home, in ourselves, in our communities, and in our hearts.

We must encourage our young people to look past the saying and examine what it really means. Increase the peace, not increase the spending. We must motivate each other to prosperity but spiritually as much as mentally as much as monetarily. Increase the peace but increase the awareness which will increase our growth as a people.

As the high school or college graduates walk across the stage to receive their diplomas, there needs to also be a table setup nearby to do voter registration. If any of these young people or their parents are concerned about the bleak outlook for employment opportunities, or the high cost of education which has prevented far too many students from entering going on to college, or completing their schooling, they need to register to vote and make their feelings known at election time.

Graduates who are ready to enter the job market, face a situation which indicates that over 50% of those seeking jobs, will not be able to find one, and will probably still be unemployed a year from now. For students and parents who have just invested close to $10,000 and up, over the last four years, and are looking at loan payments which have to start being paid off, the joy of graduating and achieving one's academic goals, is short lived. As opposed to hope, and excitement, feelings of pessimism and uncertainty fill the air.

If our most successful young people feel this way, you know that hopelessness among those young people who have dropped out of school, or who have had to leave college because they couldn't afford the tuition, must be overwhelming. There are a lot of things that we need to do, to offer our young people some encouragement and hope that things can get better but only if they get involved and work to change the status quo. Most young people aren't even registered to vote. While they can complain about what's wrong, it's not too late for them to help make it right. All those civic lessons they had in their social studies classes, must now move from theory to practice. It shouldn't be left up to a few select group of people to decide who will govern, and lead America into the 21st century. Who better to lead them than our youth? There are a lot of young dynamic men and women who aren't wedded to old ideas and methods, and who have not gotten set in their ways. They don't fear change, and that's what is so important if any progress is to be made.

Political candidates and parties need to reach out to this constituency if they are smart. Unfortunately, the major political parties haven't adequately reached out to this group, and have continued to rely on the old guard as their base of support. The class of 1992 cannot

by Connie Woodruff

More than 900 newly elected Democratic county committee members and women gathered at Town and Country for the party's annual reorganization meeting.

As soon as you hit the door the seasoned politician knew it was a "done deal" for Tom D'Alesio. One of his workers was immediately inside with sticker labels and only the very brave declined to put it on a lapel or dress.

It was so cut and dried there was no excitement in the air. No atmosphere of mystery. Nothing to look forward to in the way of opposition.

Ray Durkin, in opening the meeting, thanked constituents for the 12 years he served as chairman, making it perfectly clear he was not enthusiastic followers doing anything as foolish as perhaps remaining him from the floor.

Tom Gublin, Essex County Supervisor and head of the powerful Local 68 Operating Engineers Union sat quietly in the center of the ballroom, casually observing the proceedings. It was apparent those who would have voted for Tom were cautioned against any kind of demonstration.

When D'Alesio entered the room the bald immediately struck up the theme song of his admiration, "Happy days are here again." And the cheers that greeted him spoke louder than words. He was a man on his way to new political heights and there was no stopping the unanimous vote that put him in as Essex County's new Democratic Party Chairman.

Of course not everybody was happy but they were too cowardly to speak openly against the party's choice. A new party boss was in the making and people either had to protect their jobs or to some more importantly, their status.

D'Alesio reached back for party loyalty to serve in his administration. Larrie West Stalks, county registrar was elected vice chairman and Michael Cortese, the freelance budget consultant is party treasurer. Newark attorney Elmer Herman has been plucked for Parliamentarian.

The one face in the mix is Betty Ayala who replaces Raymond Rappaport of Irvington as secretary. She seems to be an indication of the Democrats effort to capture the Puerto Rican vote.

Stalks' election was assured when veteran South Ward Democratic vice chairman Queenie James declined to run for another term. James was recently given a job in the Citizens' Services department working with the County Division on Aging.

It was not unexpected that Mayor Sharpe James nominated D'Alesio on a theme of "New Dreams, New Leadership, Anagetic grace." The mayor was equally gracious in thanking Durkin for 12 years of leadership that strengthened the party and brought it many victories.

The nomination was seconded by a bevy of familiar faces: Pat Sobol of Livingston, Mayor Robert Brown of Orange, Phillip Kegan of Maplewood and Ralph Harris, East Orange councilman.

Fran Aduabo, Newark North Ward Democratic chairman nominated Larrie Stalks. Seconded included Newark Assemblyman Willie Brown, East Orange municipal chair, Bradford Grey and Irvington chairman Joseph Gallagher.

Except for the absence of the traditional hotdogs, beer and booze, the scene was a reminder that whenever more than one Democrat gathers, you have the making of an old fashioned political rally where none of the faithful questions the actions of the status quo.

This is not to say some folks are questioning whether or not D'Alesio will have the time and stamina to handle the full-time responsibilities of party boss and county executive. D'Alesio is quick to assure you he can do both with no problem.

One can see D'Alesio is already being courted by a contingent of lobbyists, P.R. "specialists" and political consultants. They too were out in full force with eager, friendly faces waiting to parade their wares of how to bring their party together, make state and federal contracts and do all the things professional political consultants are noted for in good times and bad.

Elsewhere in the sprawling confines of Town and Campus small groups of blacks raised the question of when a black lawyer appointed Essex County prosecutor.

Last winter the question of prosecutor was briefly raised again by the coalition of clergy, elected officials and community activists. But since then some have taken jobs, others appointments and others simply abandoned the idea.

There were a few old timers around but they weren't saying much either.

Former Newark mayor Ken Gibson came in alone, scattered around shaking hands and flashing his familiar smile. "Just observing," said one of his political allies.

Then there was Newark-Orange attorney Cecil Banks who seemed to be there just because for one night it seemed to be for a few hours. Rev. Levin West was eased out of his role when Newark councilman at-large Ralph Grant delivered the invocation. It was weird seeing Rev. West on the sidelines.

In another part of the huge ballroom, supporters of James Wallace and Saidi Ngura just glared at each other. They know Wallace and Saidi may end up in court over which man was elected Central Ward Democratic chairman when that group held its reorganization meeting.

Apparently Bob Brown of Orange is not about to share too much of the political wealth. He was re-elected mayor, last year he became an Assemblyman from the district and he is also Democratic Chairman for the city of Orange.

Looks like a new political day on the horizon for Caddy White of East Orange. After devoting years to the cause of others, she has finally hit the jackpot as the new municipal vice chair serving with the new municipal chair Bradford Grey.

And now the Democrats can settle down before invading the Big Apple for the coronation of Governor Clinton as the party's nominee for president.

Voter registration always en vogue

the political establishment on its ear. Imagine if thousands of young people registered, and made it known that they were going to vote in the upcoming November elections? I believe that this could significantly alter the political strategy and thinking of the major parties and candidates. Party platforms would have to be reworked or revamped to reflect more of the ideas, and views of young people. There may be issues which young people see as crucial to be addressed or even addressed differently than aren't currently included in these platforms. Lip service is given to the need to develop future leaders, but talk must move to action, and opportunity provided for development and nurturing. Registration tables need to be set up in all of the high schools, college campuses, recreation facilities, etc. that young people attend. There is a need for people to volunteer to participate in these registration drives. We should have vans and buses to pick up our senior citizens to take them to the polls, and we should also try to extend the same services to young people, especially first time voters. We should do everything we can to make it easier for them to vote, and then expect them to follow through on this responsibility in the future.

Once, when I was participating in a voter registration drive, a young woman who was with her mother replied when I asked her if she was registered to vote that, no she wasn't, because she still lived at home (she confirmed the fact that she was 18 years old). When I asked her what I'd like at home have to do with preventing her from voting if she was 18 years of age and eligible to vote she stated, "Well, it's not my job, my mother does that." Far too many young people feel this way. Parents must let them know, that it is in fact, their job to vote. Parents should also take them to the polls to vote when they go, and set the example.

In this important presidential election year, now, more than ever, every vote counts. Young people can dramatically alter the political landscape. The class of 1992 can make it's mark in a way that will be felt for years. They should be encouraged to do so, and we should welcome this fresh new perspective.

Letter to the editor...

Community needs support

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter to publicly express my concern about the palpable lack of participation, interest and support shown by our parents, educational leaders, and our elected officials, as it relates to their attendance at church concerns, cultural programs and athletic events. This lack of support and involvement not only sends the wrong signal to our students, but it also perpetuates and aggravates the problem. Now that I have identified an opportunity area, I would be remiss if I didn't offer some recommended procedures to address this concern.

Let me first state that I am a parent with three children in the fairfield public school system (elementary, middle, and high school), truly believe that our system has the potential to provide the level and quality of education that we want for our children, and I want to be the first to offer my support to the many teachers, administrators, board members, elected officials and parents, who have continually demonstrated their commitment to achieving this goal. Secondly, I believe that, although the lack of adequate funding is always cited as an issue, there are some inexpensive, innovative ways that can be utilized by our elected community leaders (school board members and city council members) to increase the level of participation and support for our school's programs.

The following suggestions are offered for consideration: All school events, programs and activities should be regularly publicized in the newspapers serving our community. Personal letters, seeking their attendance, should be sent to all parents and guardians whose children will be participating in a particular program or event; Personal letters of acknowledgment should be sent to all students who participate in a school program or event; School board and city council members should attend, and be recognized at, all programs and events (at athletic events, they should be wearing the team's colors); and Recognizing that not all parents may be able to be present in PTO's, school board members should seek the involvement of parents for specific projects.

I am not trying to imply that some of these suggestions are already being done. I do believe, however, that more can be done. It is up to us to make the positive changes that must be done. We must be "part of the solution," otherwise we will be "part of the problem." We must "lead, follow or get out of the way!" For the sake of our children, can we afford to do otherwise?

Signed
A. Eugene Raucum, Jr.

Kean athletes share in school's sports award

UNION — Fred Drains of Woodstown, Cheryl Bullock of South Plainfield and Michelle Kirkland of East Rutherford are winners of Kean College's D'Angola Award, the highest honor presented to a student-athlete at Kean.

Registration underway in East Orange for basketball camp

EAST ORANGE — Registration is now underway in East Orange for the East Orange Summer Basketball Clinic. The five-week clinic begins on July 6 and continues through August 7. Sponsored by the East Orange Department of Recreation, it will take place in the gym of Upsala College. According to Clinic Director Greg Tyne, the primary purpose of the clinic is to teach the fundamental skills necessary to play basketball.

The clinic is open to boys and girls ages eight through 13. The registration fee is $25 per week. Youngsters can register on Saturday, June 20 from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the Clifford J. Scott High School gym. For more information call 201-674-1562 or 201-266-5252.

Commissioner, State Board honor NJ's Presidential Scholars

TRENTON — New Jersey's five Presidential Scholars for 1992 were recently honored by the Commissioner of Education, John Ellis and the New Jersey State Board of Education.

The National Presidential Scholars Program recognizes high school seniors for their academic achievement, leadership, character and commitment to high ideals, and for their accomplishments in the performing or creative arts. Presidential Scholars were designated by President Bush and U.S. Education Secretary Lamar Alexander.

The 1992 Presidential Scholars from New Jersey are Christina Chou of Montville High School.

Joanne Liu of Lawrenceville School, a resident of Princeton Junction; David Rolf of Montclair High School; Susan Su of Lawrence High School; Jeffrey Weiner of Hotchkiss School (Conn.), a resident of Fort Lee. The state also recently recognized the New Jersey Westinghouse Award Recipient, Patricia Bachiller, a Scotch Plains High School senior, who studied animal behavior. The Westinghouse Science Talent Search awards scholarships to 40 high school seniors nationwide for research projects in science, mathematics, and engineering. It is the nation's oldest science competition for high school seniors.

NEWARK HONORS RECYCLING POSTER CONTEST WINNERS

NEWARK — Newark's youth displayed the products of their artistic talents and environmental awareness at the awards luncheon for Newark's Fifth Annual Recycling Poster Contest, held recently at Don Pepe restaurant.

Hundreds of students entered the contest, which is sponsored annually by the Newark Office of Recycling and Newark Board of Education. Entries focused on the 1992 theme, "Newark: Recycling for a Better City and a Better World."

A total of 10 students won cash prizes ranging from $25 for third place to $50 for second, $75 for first and $100 for the overall winner. Winning entries were chosen on the basis of their artistic quality and impact of their pro-recycling messages.

"We were very pleased by the high level of environmental awareness displayed in the posters entered in the contest," said Deputy Mayor Calvin West, who spoke on behalf of Mayor Sharpe James. "I think it's a positive sign that, as our future leaders, these students will work to repair our damaged environment and make waste reduction and recycling a key part of their efforts."

Newark Public Schools Art Education Director Franotico Washington presented awards to the contest's overall winner, Jose Jeter of Newton Street school, and first, second and third prize winners in three age categories. She was assisted by Newark Municipal Council members Henry Martinez and George Branch.

The Group I (Grades 4-6) winners were: Malik Faqan Chambers of Hawthorne Avenue School, first prize; Omar Joyner of Harriet Tubman School, second prize; and Yawza Calderon of Elliot Street School, third prize.

Group II (Grades 7-8) winners were: Temecca Chapman of Harold Wilson School, first prize; Jenesse Rodriguez of Louise A. Spencer School, second prize; and Taubeha Robinson of Harold Wilson School, third prize.

Group III (Grades 9-12) winners were: Luis Arroyo of Arts High, first prize; Linda Resenda of East Side High, second prize; and Jose Rodriguez of Arts High, third prize.

One of the luncheon's high points came when a group of students from an environmental group in the Philippines performed a sampling from their musical program called D.R.E.A.M.S. (Development and Rehabilitation of the Environment through Arts, Media and Science). The youth represented the Earth Savers Movement, which sponsors projects dealing with environmental issues in the Philippines.

They were accompanied by Seyffred Ordoñez, the Philippines' ambassador to the United Nations, and Cecile Guidote Alvarez, communications director for the Earth Savers and the wife of Philippine Senator Heherson T. Alvarez, the founding chairman of the Earth Savers Movement and chairman of the Senate's Committee on Natural Resources and Technology.

The group's visit to Newark came through a pairing of Newark with Quezon City, the Philippines, as sister cities in a cooperative effort to protect and rehabilitate the environment.

The Earth Savers presentation was made up of music, raps and dances promoting the preservation of our environment. The group included Francis Magalona, described by the Philippine Mission to the U.N. as the "King of Philippine Rap" and a Filipino teen movie idol of similar stature to America's Luke Perry. He was accompanied by "trap groover" Noel Macanaya.

The Earth Savers are in the metropolitan area to perform at the Global Youth Forum sponsored by the United Nations Environmental Programme and at the Philippine Center in New York. They will later travel to the United Nations Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil in June.

At the conclusion of the event, Newark Engineering Director Alvin L. Zach thanked the corporate sponsors whose support made the contest and luncheon possible. They were American Ref-Fuel Co., Amheuser Busch, Inc., the City of Newark Blue Ribbon Recycling Advisory Committee, Environmental Gifts, First Fidelity Bank, New Jersey Bell, The Occupational Center, and The Prudential Insurance Company.

Judges for the poster contest were: Dr. Alex Boyd, director of the Newark Public Library; Paulette Coleman, executive director of the Newark Collaboration Group; Laurie Cooper, environmental scientist, American Ref-Fuel Co.; Midge Guerra, director of Art Education at Newark Symphony Hall; James Kieffer, assistant manager at New Jersey Bell; Samuel Miller, director of the Newark Museum; and Joseph Verra, environmental manager at New Jersey Bell.

Donor Alert!

NEWARK — There is an urgent need in America overall but particularly in the black community for organ donations.

Donald J. Klacknick is 48-year-old male, waiting for a heart transplant at the University of Michigan hospital. His 16-year-old daughter, Holly, has Cystic Fibrosis, and is waiting for a lung transplant at the Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh. To further burden his family, his younger daughter also suffers from CF.

The Klacknicks and others are not looking for sympathy, but rather empathy in helping them fight for their lives. Only so much can be done without public assistance in the form of organ donations.

Doing their SHARE for the community

by Paul Nelson

NEWARK — It's seemingly a simple equation—maybe too simple to believe. Two hours of community service plus $13 gets you $30-$35 worth of fresh, wholesome foods.

Self Help and Resource Exchange (SHARE) is a community-based, self-program committed to building communities through community service and the distribution of monthly food packages.

The two primary objectives of SHARE are to foster a sense of community independence and additionally to continue in the fight against hunger," said executive director Janette Carroll.

Carroll says that the enrollment in SHARE is open to all and notes that unlike many other similar programs, SHARE requires no means tests or income caps. A participant may purchase as many food packages as they wish but a $13 fee along with two hours of community service must accompany each individual purchase. The program accepts food stamps as methods of payments and has no bearing on an individual's eligibility for government-assisted programs.

Calling the organization "one of the best kept secrets in New Jersey," Carroll said that daily inquiries to SHARE headquarters in Newark revealed that SHARE's best days are ahead. But for now, Carroll can take smug comfort in the figures that speak volumes about the organization's growth.

Since its introduction to New Jersey in 1985, SHARE-New Jersey has witnessed a marked increase in the number of units distributed. In 1990, Jerseyites took advantage of SHARE services to the tune of 144,068. In 1990, that figure jumped to 146,190 and 1992 has produced early figures that signal a banner year. Carroll, who began her tenure with SHARE as a volunteer, says the short-term goal of SHARE-New Jersey is to dispense 225,000 units this year.

The main ingredients in the success of SHARE are its participants.

Building a movement to win

The National Afrikan Holocaust Memorial and Reparation Conference

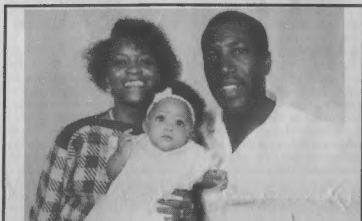

CHARLESTON, SC — The National Coalition of Blacks for Reparations in America (N'COBRA) is sponsoring its Annual National Holocaust Memorial and Reparations Conference, June 19-21, in Charleston, SC. In addition to the ecumenical Holocaust observance, the conference will include a historical tour, workshops (What is Reparation? Why We are Entitled to Reparations. Strategies to Win Reparations. Economic Development), an Afrikan/Reggae/Rap Concert, and intergenerational relay—passing the torch from one generation to the next.

The Holocaust Memorial is held in remembrance of the 250 million Afrikans/Blacks murdered in the Middle Passage, being brought to the Americas for enslavement. The Afrikan Holocaust was the systematic, intentional, and industrialized murder of approximately 250 million Afrikans/Blacks—children, women, and men of all ages—in the development of the United States and the Americas. The Afrikan Holocaust was especially cruel because the 15 to 20 million who survived the transport were enslaved and stripped of all cultural awareness and heritage, e.g. name, language, religion, history, and mores.

Towards achieving the goal of Building A Movement To Win, Saturday activities will begin with a tour of historic sites with emphasis on importation, enslavement, and resistance. The tour will be followed by day-long working groups on strategies to win reparations, with a luncheon keynote by Aminifu Harvey—From Consciousness to Action. Sunday will start with an "inter-generational Relay: Passing the Torch." The conference will end, at 2 p.m., with an N'COBRA business meeting.

N'COBRA is a coalition of individuals and organizations committed to fighting for reparations, compensation and payment due Black people, in North America, for enslavement, and other human rights violations since its abolition. N'COBRA is headquartered in Washington DC. For more information contact Efa Nwagwu, 803-242-3039 and Vincent Godwin, 202-635-6272.

Newark resident wins prestigious Bloomfield College award

BLOOMFIELD—A mix-up in flight scheduling prior to her freshman year caused Michelle Smith to miss her audition at the North Carolina College of the Arts.

Three years later, however, the Newark resident is flying high. A junior fine and performing arts major at Bloomfield College, Michelle is the 1992 winner of the College's Emil R. and Tamar Weiss Award in Creative Arts.

The scholarship was endowed last year through the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Weiss, noted community leaders from Glen Ridge, and is presented to "a deserving student whose interest in the arts might otherwise not be stimulated," Mr. Weiss explained. "Adding worthwhile new dimensions to daily life is the ultimate goal."

The award is based on general competence, achievement, and promise in the arts. Recipients are required to undertake an independent project during the senior year at the College.

Michelle, who grew up in Jamaica, West Indies and now lives in Newark's Vailsburg section, will produce and star in a one-woman show about women in today's society. Opening night will be held in November in the College's Robert V. Van Fossan Theatre.

"I plan for the show to be a series of vignettes which are comical and sentimental, historical and partly autobiographical," Michelle said. "I want to have a real impact on the audience."

"I'm very proud of Michelle and also very excited because I think that the one-woman show that the Weiss award is making possible for her will prove to be a crucial step towards her development into a professional performing artist," said John Towson, the College's director of performing arts.

Michelle credits Towson for her growth as a student, performer, and individual.

"John's been my mentor and friend," she said. "He first saw me perform a monologue on Moliere during my first semester and encouraged me to pursue my talents."

The aspiring actress/singer has been displaying these talents before audiences throughout New Jersey as a member of Controversy, the College's student theatre group that addresses social and political issues using improvisational and scripted techniques.

Controversy recently was featured on "Destroying The Rainbow—Kids Talk About Racism," a special live audience and call-in presentation airing on the New Jersey Network and focusing on high school students' reactions to the Rodney King verdict and the Los Angeles uprising and their effect on racial issues nationwide. The group also performs during freshman orientations on campuses throughout New Jersey, at which group members address issues of concern to college students.

"Bloomfield College is breaking new ground in theatre and the arts," Michelle said, citing Controversy and the College's unique Arts-As-A-Catalyst program.

Michelle also is active with the College's Music, Theatre, and Arts Club, which stages noted plays and "I really like the intimate environment and personal attention here at BC," said Michelle, who also works shows, as well as original material throughout the academic year.

"I really like the intimate environment and personal attention here at BC," said Michelle who also works full time as a personnel specialist at Sears in Livingston.

Big Man, Clarence Clemons, hits Club Bene

SAYERVILLE — Sax man Clarence Clemons will be appearing in concert at the Club Bene Dinner Theatre on Father's Day, June 21 for one night only. On this evening there will be one show at 9 p.m. with an optional dinner at 7 p.m.

Also appearing on the bill will be the Soul Engines, one of New Jersey's favorite rock and roll bands. A special guest attraction will be The Nick Clemons Band, Nick is the son of Clarence.

Clemons and Bruce Springsteen have stood together as the leaders of the E Street Band. On this date, Clemons will be fronting the band along with Steve Smith.

Besides the hits he has played on with the E Street Band, he also had a top ten hit on vocals with Jackson Browne called "You're A Friend of Mine."

Nine days of cycling fun at CoreStates Festival

PHILADELPHIA, PA — The CoreStates Championship Festival offered nine days of public events for participants and spectators during the US PRO Cycling Championship which ran from May 30 to June 7.

The $100,000 race, the richest one-day cycling event in the United States, is the official championship of US professional road cycling and spanned from Philadelphia to Valley Forge to Freehold, New Jersey. The popularity of the race is indicative of just how popular cycling has become in the country. With a number of professionally-sanctioned events now available to an increasing number of racers, cycling is currently in a period of growth that has not been seen since the early 1900s.

In addition to the three professional races that took place, CoreStates also offered 10 recreational activities including the Manayunk Main Street Stroll where vintage cyclists joined costumed strollers in enjoying the flavor of Manayunk with food, music, and prizes for the best costumes, the Leukemia Society of America Cycling for a Cure Bike-a-Thon, and the American Youth Hostels Freedom Valley Bike Ride.

WASHINGTON, DC (NNPA) — Bucks over ballots should be the bearing of the future for blacks. Blacks' practices don't indicate an understanding that if you've got big bucks you can control the actions of politicians. In the case of the Ross Perot march for President, proper use of the ballot by blacks may help to bring more blacks and political power into our hands and neighborhoods. As disadvantaged as we are, and have been over the past 20 years, African-Americans should be cautious about continuing to march, in lock step, to polling places to overwhelmingly cast our votes for Democrats. Can we afford to keep being childlike in seeking mainstream acceptance in the two major parties? Surely independent thinking on our part will cause many of us to look closer toward the independent presidential candidacy of Mr. Ross Perot.

Perot is a Texas white businessman who has electrified a great segment of American electorate. He is mounting a strong independent campaign for President against the Republican George Bush and his campaign for re-election, and the Democratic contender, Governor Bill Clinton. Perot has captured the attention of recession-wary Americans because he offers hope to their current disengagement and disillusionment. Blacks, who know the most about disengagement and alienation, should be looking for something more this time than their ballot but just "keeping hope alive." African-Americans need someone who can help us gain more bucks in our pockets, and neighborhoods, and less promises from politicians for equity "with all deliberate speed." Not only were we ignored by the Bush and Reagan Administrations during the last dozen years, what have our Democratic friends in the Congress and statehouses done to help get equal shares of America's wealth in the last 20 years? Doesn't it make sense for blacks to take a good long look at what an independent campaign can do to help us get more power and political parity in America? Can we continue to provide our ballots to support traditional party candidates into the next four years at the risk of getting the same things from them that we've gotten before, the sum total of that being little to nothing?

Blacks have been given the opportunity to use the ballot for decades now. After giving most of our ballots to Democrats and a lesser amount to Republicans, we have still been regulated to the sidelines of American society because we have no national power beyond our vote. Isn't it time that we get more bang for our ballots? Could it be said that when it comes to politics, we're stuck on autopilot? Before blacks throw their votes away again this year, maybe we should ask Perot what he would do for us if he were at the helm. In his commitment to a muscled balanced budget for the national government, can we gain a promise from Perot for funds to help the 80 percent of us in the cities to get more in the way of urban development for our neighborhoods? The traditional politicians have been "fixing us to get ready" to help us for far too many years. If Perot were elected President would he see it to that his Administration has the proper kind of proper cultural diversity which would assure that we had our population's range of representation in all agencies of government? Would Perot see it to that ongoing communications links are made with traditional, and grass roots, black organizations to help us gain equality in health, education, and economics? Would he create a climate to allow us equal access to the Great American Pie? Many blacks will listen to the status quo proponents who say that "Perot is using his buck to buy the Presidency." But they don't know that political action groups (PACs) have been buying ballots and politicians for years. Many blacks who say they are "sick and tired of being sick and tired," should seek ways of directly turning their lives around. Blacks who still believe in the power of their ballot should, at least, give consideration to the Perot Parade. Blacks who hold a course toward bigger bucks through enterprise couldn't find a better role model than Perot to lift them, too, to the level of "rich constituents."
